

2020 FACULTY AWARD

The Faculty Award singles out that faculty member who, in the opinion of his or her colleagues, has contributed outstanding service to the University. A researcher at the frontier of cell biology and molecular oncology, this year's recipient has led her department through a major change in its undergraduate program during her six years as chair, including the development of a redesigned introductory biology course sequence. Her structured, inclusive planning and prescient leadership have been critical to the department's upward trajectory in securing external research grants as well as its success recruiting faculty at both the senior and junior levels. She is known as someone who is knowledgeable, empathetic, and dedicated to the flourishing of her colleagues, a mentor who is always willing to think through a challenge and offer advice. Beyond her department, she has impacted the broader Notre Dame community through her work on numerous committees and panels.

The University of Notre Dame is proud to present the 2020 Faculty Award to

Crislyn D'Souza-Schorey

Morris Pollard Collegiate Professor of Biological Sciences