Mary Gallagher appointed dean of the Keough School of Global Affairs

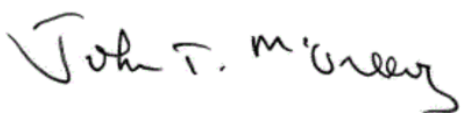

Dear Colleagues,

I am pleased to announce that we have successfully concluded our search for the dean of the Keough School of Global Affairs. Mary Gallagher, the Amy and Alan Lowenstein Chair in Democracy, Democratization, and Human Rights and director of the International Institute at the University of Michigan, has accepted our offer and will begin as dean on July 1.

As you will read in this news release, Mary is an award-winning teacher and scholar with an impressive international research profile, extensive policy and administrative experience, and a deep commitment to the Keough School's mission of integral human development. We were uniformly impressed with her vision, leadership style, and track record of fostering collaboration across diverse units and scholars.

Please join me in welcoming Mary to the Notre Dame community and in extending gratitude to Scott Appleby, whose leadership as founding dean of the Keough School has been simply extraordinary. Starting the University's first new school in nearly a century is no easy task and yet Scott has excelled at every dimension of this role. The remarkable teaching, scholarship, and policy efforts of the faculty he has attracted and collaborated with have made Notre Dame much stronger. The work of the generations of students trained in the undergraduate, master's and Ph.D. programs of the school will also be an important part of his legacy.

Sincerely,

John T. McGreevy
Charles and Jill Fischer Provost
